2. Resources and Support

Workshop: Ethical and methodological challenges in refugee research
What: A workshop to discuss and share knowledge about challenges and effective strategies in asylum seeker and refugee research across a variety of disciplines, through presentations and group activities.
Enquiries: ecolucci@unimelb.edu.au

Melbourne School of Government Doctoral Academy: Researching Children and Young People in Theory, Policy and Practice Master Class
What: The Melbourne School of Government Doctoral Academy invites PhD candidates who are studying children and young people from across the University of Melbourne to come together to share and discuss the major themes, challenges and opportunities that characterise their work. This masterclass will bring together a small group of outstanding doctoral researchers from across a range of different disciplines to engage in a seminar discussion with leading children’s rights scholar Prof. John Tobin, and present the central themes and challenges arising from their own projects. There will also be an opportunity for participants to discuss and develop an ongoing interdisciplinary research forum that reflects the needs and objectives of candidates working in this field.

The event is especially oriented to research that considers:

- how we theorise and understand children and young people;
- policy settings affecting and shaping the lives of children and young people;
- the challenges of including and accounting for children and young people in policy-making processes;
- and, the practice of researching and working with and for children and young people.

The masterclass will be followed by the official launch of the Melbourne School of Government Doctoral Academy by Australia’s Race Discrimination Commissioner, Dr. Tim Soutphommasane.
Workshop Time: 12:30pm-4:30pm, Friday 21 November 2014
Interested doctoral candidates should email a short 100-200 word abstract that outlines their research and interest in children and young people to Dr. Sana Nakata, snakata@unimelb.edu.au by Monday 10 November.

Public Talk: Making an Emotional Body: Christmas in Greccio according to the Vita prima of Francis of Assisi by Thomas of Celano

What: Barbara Rosenwein elaborated the notion of emotional communities as a way of explaining the affective dimension of social and cultural groups. But how is an ‘emotional community’ born? Exploring a famous case from medieval religious history, Professor Piroska Nagy will test the hypothesis according to which shared emotional events or processes can induce the formation of an emotional or affective community. One of the best known episodes in the life of saint Francis of Assisi is his celebration of Christmas in 1223 in the little town of Greccio. The episode is told in detail by Thomas of Celano in his first biography written in 1228-29. Later sources on Francis report the episode differently, according to their particular agenda; and it is also included in the iconographic cycles that depict Francis’s life. Nagy’s aim in this presentation is firstly, to analyse the work of emotions in the creation of communal feeling, through the careful observation of what happened in Greccio according to the first sources, and how they can be understood within the context of Franciscan history; and secondly, to show how the transformation of the episode in later sources reveals what can be called a Franciscan politics of emotion.

Human Rights Lecture: Language rights, education and identity in Timor-Leste

What: As the Southeast Asia region’s newest nation emerging from centuries of colonial rule and a brutal 24-year occupation, Timor-Leste faces immense challenges in establishing a quality education system and national curriculum which reflect and uphold the country’s rich cultural heritage and resilience of its people. In the University of Melbourne’s Human Rights Lecture, Kirsty Sword Gusmão will share her experiences of working to develop a national language-in-education policy which respects the linguistic rights of children to acquire literacy in their mother tongue, and to create a new primary curriculum which fosters pride in the nation’s unique cultural identity, history of struggle and experience of nation-building. Addressing the complex issue of national identity in a post-colonial and post-conflict setting, Ms Sword Gusmão will also offer her reflections on Timor-Leste’s leadership in championing the rights of fragile states in the developing world in their relations with large, wealthy donor countries.

5. Conferences

Conference: Phenomenography Futures Research Symposium

What: Phenomenography is a qualitative research methodology, within the interpretivist paradigm, that investigates the qualitatively different ways in which people experience something or think about something. It is an approach to educational research which appeared in publications in the early 1980s. It initially emerged from an empirical rather than a theoretical or philosophical basis. Phenomenography Futures will bring together delegates with a common interest in phenomenography, to network and discuss issues and trends in phenomenographic research. It will also provides a forum to showcase phenomenographic projects.

Conference Dates: 5th December 2014

Conference Location: Brisbane, Queensland, Australia

Conference: Waste: Postgraduate Interdisciplinary Conference

What: It evokes shame and revulsion; it implies excess or inefficiency. But in an overpopulated world, waste is an increasing concern. This interdisciplinary conference seeks to understand how we confront, deny, define, fear and are fascinated by waste. Organised by Division of Education, Arts and Social Sciences, University of South Australia.

Conference Dates: 8th to 10th December 2014

Conference Location: Adelaide, South Australia, Australia

6. Profile, Publishing and Exhibiting Opportunities

REMINDER Registration and Call for abstracts: Melbourne Social Equity Institute Third Annual Research with children workshop

What: Academics and Research Higher Degree students from all faculties and schools within Melbourne University are invited to attend and submit an abstract for this workshop which is designed to:
• promote awareness of, and
• foster collaboration among researchers, about innovative methodologies for undertaking research with and for children. Abstracts should focus on the use of innovative methodologies with respect to research with and for children and adolescents (such as child participation in research, use of visual and digital research, strategies for addressing ethics and innovation in the ‘dissemination’, writing and representation of research with children and young people). Each presentation will be limited to around 15 minutes with the emphasis being on the creation of a discussion among participants.

Email abstracts (one page maximum) to Professor John Tobin, j.tobin@unimelb.edu.au by 14 November. Registration for this workshop is also open and seats are limited.

Workshop Date: Friday 5 December, 9-1pm
Where: Frank Tate Room, Melbourne Graduate School of Education, Parkville Campus

★ Thirteenth International Conference on New Directions in the Humanities
What: The Humanities Conference is held annually in different locations around the world. Over the past twelve years, the Humanities Conference has established a reputation as a focal point for new ideas and new practices in humanities research and teaching.
The conference will address a range of critically important themes in the various fields that make up the humanities today. Plenary speakers will include some of the world’s leading thinkers in the humanities, as well as numerous paper, workshop and colloquium presentations by teachers and researchers. The conference will analyze this special focus through an interdisciplinary lens, addressing the theme through keynote speakers, garden sessions, workshops, and parallel sessions:
• The ‘digital’ as a social imaginary: exploring historical continuities and ruptures in social and cultural practices in the era of digital cultures.
• The digital within the humanities: new methods and tools for documentation, research, and representation.
• The political economy of digital humanities: e-learning, e-publishing, and the reframing of disciplines and institutions.
• Big data and little data; negotiating the public and the private.
• Open access and open cultures: developing sustainable knowledge ecologies
• Adapting methodologies and focus in the digital age: has the dust settled on the ‘digital humanities’?
• From the digital humanities, to a humanities of the digital; rebuilding the humanities in the shadow of the digital, and developing a humanities of the digital.

Call for abstracts: SOCIO CRI '15 / II. International Sociology and Critical Perspectives Conference on Social Movements
What: DAKAM invites scholars from across the globe to come together in Sociology and Critical Perspectives Conference / SOCIO CRI '15 to discuss the concept of “social movements”, a theme obviously includes the most influential sociological questions of the present day. Political science and sociology have developed a variety of theories and empirical research on social movements. With regard to these studies, subjects such as definitions of social movements, functions of social movements, and possible forms of social movements at different scales are going to come under spotlight in SOCIO CRI ’15. The aim is to explore the dynamics of social movements, along with the ideas that motivate their activists and supporters. Given the significance of the mass movements in numbers of countries during the early years of this decade, we especially welcome papers discussing these – while also welcoming papers on other topics such as history and theory of social movements. The full papers are going to be published in the proceedings book with an ISBN number, and will be sent to be reviewed for inclusion in the "Thomson & Reuters Web of Science's Conference Proceedings Citation Index" (CPCI).
Conference Dates: 2nd to 4th July 2015
Conference Location: Istanbul, Turkey
Deadline for abstracts/proposals: 27th March 2015
Further information: http://www.sociocriconference.org
Call for abstracts: Second International Conference on Culture and Cultural Policies

What: Culture is a set of rules and behavioural patterns we learn with socialisation. However, in a globalised (and multicultural) world culture became subject of discussions from various points of views, and its importance is not losing strength. In the past century, we witnessed many attempts to foster cultural agendas using popular culture where identities were formed in a way to present one nation to other nations in a favourable way, and where audiences were confronted with various messages that are sometimes blurred with first-hand experiences.

Deadline for abstracts/proposals: Prospective participants are also welcome to submit proposals for their own panels. Submissions of abstracts (up to 500 words) with an email contact should be sent to Dr Martina Topić martina@socialsciencesandhumanities.com by 10 April 2015.

Conference Dates: 25th to 26th April 2015
Conference Location: Vienna, Austria
