What is 23 Research Things? 23 Research Things is a self-directed, online learning programme for university staff and graduate students, showcasing a range of digital tools that can support research activity. The programme will share and explore new digital tools that might be useful to you and will also provide a framework for evaluation, reflection and for the wider integration of digital technologies within your research practice. Each week, we’ll talk about one or more of the tools/tasks from our 23 Things programme and encourage you to try it out and reflect on how it could be of benefit to your work as a researcher. 23 Research Things is an initiative of the University of Melbourne Library and has been inspired by the Bodleian Library’s 23 Things for Research at Oxford and the DH23 Things programme at the University of Cambridge. The original 23 Things program was developed by the Public Library of Charlotte & Mecklenburg County in the USA in 2006.

Humanities Research Centre, ANU: History, Cinema, Digital Archives Conference
What: Since the advent of cinema in the mid-1890s, a series of developments has reconfigured visual reproduction in terms of screens, projection methods, architectural spaces of exhibition, and the economics and sociability of viewing. There have been intense moments of rupture when new configurations have superseded old: corporate management overwhelming small-time entrepreneurs; synchronised talking pictures eradicating silent; multiplexes engulfing single-screen venues; intimate viewing displacing public; digital formats driving out film. In the early decades of the 21st century, it is the last of these, still underway, which compels notice and focuses attention on the future of infinitely morphing platforms. But let us not forget the screen’s past and the effect of the digital revolution on research into its history. Cultural and film historians, archivists and visual creators are all exercised by the spectre of dead media and the enchantment of new insights and methodologies.
