1. RESOURCES AND SUPPORT

★ RIOT MANDATORY FOR ALL NEW GRADUATE RESEARCH STUDENTS
Research Integrity Online Training (RIOT) will be mandatory for all graduate researchers commencing from 1 July 2016. Launched by the Office for Research Ethics and Integrity (OREI), RIOT is a University-wide training community that introduces the principles that underpin responsible conduct of research. RIOT is an online community on the University’s Learning Management System (LMS), which hosts discipline-specific modules. Topics covered include: authorship, data management, research ethics and the responsible communication of research. In addition to the principles-based online content, OREI also hosts optional practical workshops to extend the online learning.

Successful completion of RIOT is a requirement for confirmation of graduate research students commencing on or after 1 July 2016, and is strongly recommended for all current graduate research students who commenced prior to this date. This requirement is now reflected on the Confirmation of Candidature form. With support from Learning Environments, all newly enrolled graduate research students will be automatically added to the RIOT community.

The online nature of RIOT means that graduate research students can use RIOT from the start of their candidature and complete training at their own pace. Graduate research students who enrolled prior to 1 July 2016 or have not been added to the RIOT community can access RIOT using the instructions on this webpage: http://go.unimelb.edu.au/4gua.
